Review

‘At last, the long awaited volume on Psychological Types by the preeminent analyst-scholar of Jung's typology, John Beebe, MD. This distillation of a lifetime's work by John Beebe is without parallel in the study of types. Emerging out of numerous, stellar presentations and publications, based on years of teaching, leading workshops and seminars around the globe, Energies and Patterns in Psychological Type: The Reservoir of Consciousness will richly reward readers fortunate enough to have obtained a copy. Jung's original vision is imagined forward into the fullness of a systemic, archetypally based, theory of consciousness, which in turn is complemented by diverse applications. Not only is model amplified with a range of clinical example, but it is masterfully applied to film, history and contemporary culture. If you wish to understand the depth and importance of psychological typology, this book is essential.’ - Joe Cambray, Ph.D., Provost Pacifica Graduate Institute; Past-President of the IAAP

‘For years now, John Beebe has been clarifying and expanding Jung's theory of type. In the articles gathered for this book, ranging from the historical to the practical, from the clinical to the social and political, he charts typological processes in which different kinds of consciousness spark and react in unexpected constellations moving towards wholeness and integrity. His psychotherapeutic system is precise and generous, his tone is firm and intelligently optimistic, and his arguments are hard-edged and crystal clear. In the field of Jungian typology, this is now the essential book.’ - Craig Stephenson, author of Possession: Jung's Comparative Anatomy of the Psyche and Anteros: A Forgotten Myth

‘This book should be required reading for all who use psychological type. John's rich coverage of the historical and theoretical foundations and his powerful model of how we use all eight function-attitudes provide a strong foundation for using type well rather than with limiting stereotypes. His approach helps unlock development and increase well being. An added bonus comes in seeing the relevance of type for larger social issues and John's personal examples.’ - Linda V. Berens, Ph.D., Typology Thought Leader, Author, and Organizational Consultant, USA

‘Beebe's excellent latest book traces the history and development of psychological type theory. Building on the work of Jung, von Franz and Myers, he introduces his own innovative model with its hierarchy of differentiation for the eight function-attitudes, the first four being in consciousness and the other four, shadow in attitude, largely unconscious. These eight differentiate themselves in the course of personal development, and Beebe has identified discrete archetypal figures that guide the way they are expressed within an individual's psyche. These he illustrates with scenarios drawn from analysis of dreams and film characters. A 'must' for your bookshelf!' – Dr Gillian Clack, editor of TypeFace, British Association for Psychological Type

This book encapsulates John Beebe's influential work on the analytical psychology of consciousness. Building on C. G. Jung's theory of psychological types and on subsequent clarifications by Marie-Louise von Franz and Isabel Briggs Myers, Beebe demonstrates the bond between the eight types of consciousness Jung named and the archetypal complexes that impart energy and purpose to our emotions, fantasies, and dreams. For this collection, Beebe has revised and updated his most influential and significant previously published papers and has introduced, in a brand new chapter, a surprising theory of type and culture.

Beebe's model enables readers to take what they already know about psychological types and apply it to depth psychology. The insights contained in the fifteen chapters of this book will be especially valuable for Jungian psychotherapists, post-Jungian academics and scholars, psychological type practitioners, and type enthusiasts.

One of the best typology books out there.

By R. BUKOWSKI

The highlights of the book to me is how John explains the structure of Jungian typology as he knows it now, but then goes deeper into how different complexes can have dialogues with themselves. Another highlight is how he shows how barren typing is and how rich it can be by seeing how people can be mistyped and how to be patient until the right clues come about (eg. How society conditions certain functional preferences against personal preferences causing neuroticism.) The beginning of the book describes how the functions look to others, and to oneself showing a way in to developing the functions. I've bought some courses on engaging the functions but hopefully one day John will make reference book for that, though some others have been doing that for some time. I know John is fearful of people having breakdowns trying to develop all the functions like a hero causing more neurosis. Individuation and integrating the shadow is a slow process that is as much about being less bigoted against non-preferential types as moving more smoothly with the 8 functions.

I also appreciate the bibliography within the text to highlight further reading.

Finally; long awaited book by the creator of the full “eight-function” extension of the MBTI type model!

By Eric B

A must read for all who want to gain an understanding of his theory from the source, and all in one place. A lot of typological interpretations of fiction (and concluding with the LA Riots) which are subject to differing opinions, but really gives the basic sense of how the cognitive functions and associated archetypes play out.

Five Stars

By Strategic Thinker

Clearly articulated, well-illustrated and authoritatively written. Should be on the shelf of every depth typologist and MBTI practitioner.
