About the Author

Verda Foster

Verda Foster has worked in and around the art and crafts industry for twenty years, and you can often find her judging at one of the many ceramic and craft shows held throughout Southern California.

She has been teaching the art of painting statuary for thirteen or fourteen years, and enjoys seeing a student's eyes light up when they see a piece of white-ware come to life in their hands.

She wrote her first story in 1999 and was hooked. Her first book, The Chosen, was published in September of 2000.

She has collaborated with B. L. Miller on several stories, and loves working with this wonderful writer.

Verda Foster has a new forthcoming novel, 'These Dreams' which will be published later this year by BookEnds Press and distributed by SCP.

B. L. Miller

B. L. Miller claims to be a hermit by nature, loving to stay at home and partake in her favorite pastimes of reading, writing, and painting garden gnomes.

She was born in Massachusetts during a blizzard in 1967 and was raised in and around Albany, New York. Now a resident of Maine, she still gets teased about drinking "caw-fee." She was a wild child, spent her teenage years giving her mother gray hair and self-destructing. Now she spends her days working for a large telecommunication company and her nights sitting in front of the computer happily writing away and answering email. She loves writing and hopes to continue to do so for a very long time.

B. L.'s other works include an 'Accidental Love', 'Josie and Rebecca: The Western Chronicles,' published in 1999 by B. L. Miller and Vada Foster.

B. L. also has a novel 'Court of Love' that was only published in German.

GRACEFUL WATERS BY B L MILLER, VERDA FOSTER PDF

"...I'm sending you and that smart mouth of yours to Sapling Hill." The judge's words meant nothing to Grace Waters. He was just another disapproving voice in a long line of disapproving voices. Grace learned at an early age not to trust, not to reach out, not to believe. She'd do her time at Sapling Hill and move on with her life. She didn't need anyone. Joanna Carey, senior instructor at Sapling Hill, wasn't looking for anything more than completing one more year at the facility and getting that much closer to her private dream--a small cabin on a quiet lake. She was touch, smart, and she had a plan for her life. When tough instructor Carey meets angry and disillusioned Grace Waters, neither is prepared for what comes next. Stubborn and angry Grace meets her match in Carey, the strong and disciplined woman who is determined to help Grace help herself. What Carey is not expecting is that Grace will break through her defenses. Together, they will change each other's lives in ways that neither thought possible.

Fast-paced, Fun to Read, and Highly Recommended

By Lori L. Lake

Grace Waters is a troubled, smart-aleck, 17-year-old juvenile delinquent apparently intent on harming others and herself. She's gotten so out of hand that neither her mother nor her step-father knows what to do with her. After assaulting a teacher, the juvenile court judge incarcerates Grace until her 18th birthday, which is six months away. Grace is too angry to care. She arrives at Sapling Hill, a kind of boot camp for juveniles, and it doesn't take long for her to realize that the camp instructors don't play by the same rules as the world outside the institution. By yelling, shaming, intimidation, and withholding of privileges, the instructors compel the teen girls to behave, and they suffer consequences when they do not. Surprisingly, Grace responds-in particular, she responds to the tough and relentless Instructor Carey, who sees something in Grace that the kid doesn't even know is there. But Grace's journey isn't going to be an easy one. She is hiding secrets that first must be lanced and healed, and the young woman is in no way prepared to share, not even with Carey for whom she gradually gains a caring and respect.

From the first pages, I was hooked. The narrative is fast-paced, the secondary characters are colorful, and the dialogue sparkles. Some of the events at Sapling Hill are quite amusing, and there is plenty of conflict between the teens. It reads like a cross between "An Officer and a Gentleman" and "The Breakfast Club," in other words, immensely accessible, seemingly light-but dealing with harsh realities under the surface. Grace's journey is compelling, and Carey's role in it is honorable. The relationships that Grace develops once she drops her guard enough to look around and open up feel truthful and real.

Miller and Foster have done an excellent job showing Grace's growth curve from age 17 to 19 or so as she learns to deal with the abuses she has suffered. The romance that eventually grows for her is a fitting end to her struggle. A book that is a lot of fun to read, this one is highly recommended. ~Lori L. Lake, reviewer for Midwest Book Review and author of Gun Shy, Under The Gun, Different Dress, Ricochet In Time, and Stepping Out: Short Stories.

Graceful Water...a MUST READ!

By Patricia A. Schramm

Graceful. Such an ironic name for the violent teenage delinquent that throws a chair at her teacher, cusses a judge, and spits on a prison guard. But ironic in the sense that there is so much more to this character than her first appearance.

From the moment she steps out of the prison van and into Sapling Hill, a boot camp for girls, the reader is drawn in to this character, wanting to know everything there is to know about her and her past.

But Grace is hiding that past behind an iron wall. A wall that only one woman will be able to break down. Joanna Carey is the senior instructor at Sapling Hill and it's her tough as nails approach that will either break down that wall, or send Grace directly to prison. The choice of which happens is ultimately up to Grace.

It's this journey that keeps the reader turning the pages, watching Grace try to go from an angry juvenile delinquent to the intelligent and talented young woman that Instructor Carey sees her for. Once you start reading about this journey, you won't stop until the very last page.

Dynamic! Outstanding!

By Joyce McNeil

Graceful "Grace" Waters is an angry and belligerent 17-year-old. Chock full of attitude and bucking authority at every opportunity, she soon finds her smart-mouth landing her in front of the same judge for the umpteenth time. Patience worn thin, the judge sentences Grace to Sapling Hill - a place specifically designed for Grace's brand of attitude.

There she gets off to a very rocky start with Joanna Carey, the senior instructor of Sapling Hill. The instructor cuts Grace no slack whatsoever. Every time Grace's sarcastic attitude comes out, she finds herself having to "drop and give ten" for the instructor. Saying Grace did alot of pushups is an understatement!

Unexpected and difficult circumstances soon force Joanna and Grace to share quarters, where Joanna begins to suspect there is more to Grace's attitude than meets the eye. Whatever the reason, it was something severe enough to have made the young woman become extremely bitter and uncaring about life in general. As she spends more and more time with Grace, Joanna begins to believe that the young woman is worth saving and embarks on the task of getting Grace to face the reason behind her turmoil and anger. And maybe, just maybe, getting Grace to believe in herself once again.

When someone from Joanna's past suddently surfaces, Grace "discovers" something about Joanna that intrigues her greatly. Joanna is a lesbian. Having just begun to sort out her own identity, this fact greatly interests Grace. As Grace nears the end of her time at Sapling Hill, she finds her feelings for the erstwhile instructor changing - feelings that cannot be allowed by the instructor to be acted on. However, Grace has decided that Joanna is the "one" for her and sets out to do whatever it takes to get the reluctant older woman to believe this.

VH Foster, who also writes under the name of Verda Foster, and BL Miller, co-authors of the terrifically dynamic book Crystal's Heart, once again deliver a solid, quality tale. Graceful Waters is a book that grabs your attention and your heartstrings in the first few pages and doesn't let go - even at the very end. It's a book that very definitely defines for the reader, both young and old, that having just one person believe in you can carry you along way in believing in yourself.

Ms. Foster and Ms. Miller have also penned individual works. Ms. Foster's The Gift, The Chosen and These Dreams, as well as Ms. Miller's solo work, Accidental Love, prove without a shadow of a doubt that both authors can capture and hold a reader's attention whether writing individually or writing together.
